

CONTRA COSTA COUNTY OFFICE OF EDUCATION Professional Learning Series

The Contra Costa County Office of Education in collaboration with the UC Berkeley History-Social Science Project presents Developing Academic Language through Oral Discourse in History and Science

This four-part professional learning series will use history and science content to provide district teams tools and strategies to plan instruction for English Learners (EL).

Participants will be provided with tools to lead their departments, sites and district to implement language development strategies from the California History- Social Science Framework and Science Framework. The series will include model lessons that use content to develop language and incorporate academic discourse. Participants will then develop their own materials for developing academic language for all students. Over the course of the series, participants will explore the role of language in the content areas and develop a structure to provide all students access to demanding curriculum.

Phyllis Goldsmith, UC Berkeley History-Social Science Project Co-Director and Director of Teacher Development

Phyllis Goldsmith currently serves as the Co-Director of the UC Berkeley History-Social Science Project. She assisted in the development and implementation of the 2016 California History-Social Science Framework. Co-Director Goldsmith leads intensive institutes, K-12 workshops, school-site, and conference presentations on academic literacy strategies to integrate reading, writing, and critical thinking into standards-based backwards planning to give students access to rigorous content.
